PROTOTYPE ART

ALAN · LORETTA · CHARLES · JEAN

One hand, two halves: on the climb Alan's 11 wins. Jean can't follow, so she throws a middling 7 and keeps her 1, and her off-suit card drives the mob a step higher. After the summit Jean chases, and the weedy pony that could never win a climb trick takes the descent.

About the Game

A trick-taker that turns upside down at the summit.

A prize colt has run off with the wild horses. Big horses win the race up the mountain; the smallest win the ride down. At the top, chase the mob and stake your climb, or watch and keep it. One hand each; the highest total wins.

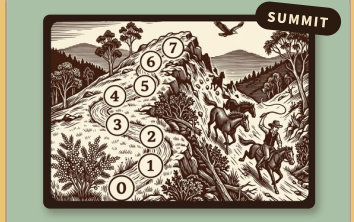

Features

- Every card has two lives. A 12 rules the climb and is useless on the way down. A 1 is the reverse.
- One bold call a hand. Everyone reveals Chase or Watch at once. A failed chase loses every climb trick, and 1 more.
- You set the clock. Run out of a suit and the mob climbs faster, flipping the order before the big hands are spent.
- No dead hands. A deal that loses the climb is holding exactly what the descent needs.

Every Hand Rides the Poem

THE MUSTER
The colt escapes
Four suits of horses, from a weedy Timor pony (1) to a thoroughbred (12). The mob is the prize.

UP THE MOUNTAIN
The climb
Follow suit; highest card wins. The mob climbs a step each trick, and a step more for every off-suit card.

AT THE TOP
Chase or watch?
Everyone chooses in secret and reveals at once. If nobody chases, the mob escapes and is worth more next hand.

THE TERRIBLE DESCENT
Bring them home
Lowest card wins. Most descent tricks reaches the mob: a chaser there brings it home, and every other chaser falls.
